It has a strong scent due to its orange essential oil. The essential oil is extracted from the fruit of the Orange plant (Citrus sinensis) by cold-press method and is therefore organic, cold-pressed oil to avoid chemical toxicity.

Sweet Orange essential oils offer a magnitude of health benefits and therapeutic properties. Some of these include:

- Anti-depressant
Well-known for its uplifting properties, orange essential oil is soothing to the mind and helps to relieve stress. It is refreshing, relaxing, rejuvenating and it is commonly used for the treatment of anxiety.
- Anti-inflammatory
It provides relief from both internal and external inflammation caused by infections. It is helpful in treating swollen tissue by stimulating blood circulation.
- Anti-septic
It inhibits microbial growth and can help ease a sore throat and ulcers.
- Improves Digestion
It is known to promote digestion, ease constipation and increase the absorption of vitamin C. We recommend using Merlins massage soaps "Orange Zircon" for massaging in the abdominal area.
- Anti-Cancer
D-limonene is a super-nutrient that occurs in Orange Essential Oil. It has been studied extensively for its ability to prevent cellular mutations and combat cancer tumor growth.

- Encourages Detoxification

Sweet Orange essential oil encourages detoxification by acting as a diuretic. It also stimulates the lymphatic system, the bladder and kidneys. Increased urination assists in the elimination of toxins like uric acid, bile and excess salts and helps relieve fluid retention. Sweet Orange essential Oil is known for its Detoxification and cleansing properties as it helps breakdown and eliminates cellulite.

- Skin Treatment

Orange essential oil is shown to promote the production of collagen, as well as increase the blood flow to the skin. It is helpful at soothing dry, irritated skin. It is excellent for rubbing on calluses on the feet.

It has a strong scent due to its orange essential oil. The essential oil is extracted from the fruit of the Orange plant (Citrus sinensis) by cold-press method and is therefore organic, cold-pressed oil to avoid chemical toxicity.

Sweet Orange essential oils offer a magnitude of health benefits and therapeutic properties. Some of these include:

- Anti-depressant
Well-known for its uplifting properties, orange essential oil is soothing to the mind and helps to relieve stress. It is refreshing, relaxing, rejuvenating and it is commonly used for the treatment of anxiety.
- Anti-inflammatory
It provides relief from both internal and external inflammation caused by infections. It is helpful in treating swollen tissue by stimulating blood circulation.
- Anti-septic
It inhibits microbial growth and can help ease a sore throat and ulcers.
- Improves Digestion
It is known to promote digestion, ease constipation and increase the absorption of vitamin C. We recommend using Merlins massage soaps "Orange Zircon" for massaging in the abdominal area.
- Anti-Cancer
D-limonene is a super-nutrient that occurs in Orange Essential Oil. It has been studied extensively for its ability to prevent cellular mutations and combat cancer tumor growth.

- Encourages Detoxification

Sweet Orange essential oil encourages detoxification by acting as a diuretic. It also stimulates the lymphatic system, the bladder and kidneys. Increased urination assists in the elimination of toxins like uric acid, bile and excess salts and helps relieve fluid retention. Sweet Orange essential Oil is known for its Detoxification and cleansing properties as it helps breakdown and eliminates cellulite.

- Skin Treatment

Orange essential oil is shown to promote the production of collagen, as well as increase the blood flow to the skin. It is helpful at soothing dry, irritated skin. It is excellent for rubbing on calluses on the feet.

It has a strong scent due to its Bergamot essential oil. Bergamot is a citrus fruit whose rind is used for extracting bergamot essential oil found in "Merlins Purple Amethyst" glycerine soaps. The scientific name of bergamot is Citrus aurantium var. or Citrus bergamia. It is a tropical plant but thrives in Europe as well. Its powerful aroma makes it a popular component in many perfumes, and it is often used as the "top note". It is derived from cold compression, as opposed to the steam distillation through which many other essential oils are derived.

Bergamot essential oils offer a magnitude of health benefits and therapeutic properties to Merlin soap users. Some of these include:

Improves Blood Circulation

The components of bergamot oil, like alpha-pinene and limonene, are antidepressant and stimulating in nature. By improving the circulation of the blood, they create a feeling of freshness, joy, and energy in cases of sadness and depression.

Prevents Infections

Certain components of the essential oil of bergamot are antibiotic and disinfectant in nature. They inhibit the growth of germs, virus, and fungi.

Reduces Pain

Bergamot essential oil reduces the feeling of pain in the body. It stimulates the secretion of certain hormones which lessen the sensitivity of nerves to pain. Therefore, it is very helpful in case of headaches, sprains, muscle aches or any other symptoms/ailments which require a heavy dosage of analgesic pills.

Relaxant & Sedative

The flavonoids present in bergamot oil are very good relaxants as well. They soothe the nerves and reduce nervous tension, anxiety, and stress, all of which can help cure ailments associated with stress such as high blood pressure, insomnia, and depression. They can also stimulate the activity of certain hormones in the body like dopamine and serotonin, which induce feelings of relaxation and sedation.

Aids in Digestion

As discussed above, bergamot essential oil activates and increases secretions of the digestive acids, enzymes, and bile, thus facilitating digestion.

Skin Care

The cicatrizant in bergamot helps heal scars and other marks on the skin. It also makes the distribution of pigments and melanin uniform, resulting in the fading away of marks and an even, attractive skin tone. This essential oil is commonly used to eliminate the unsightly effects of acne, which can leave noticeable scars on the affected areas for many years.

It has a strong scent due to its Eucalyptus essential oil. Eucalyptus is well known for its properties to everyone related to aromatherapy, throughout the centuries. It has the following properties:

It heals wounds.

Eucalyptus essential oil has antiseptic qualities because of its germicidal property. Upon exposure to air, ozone is formed which is a well-researched antiseptic. Therefore, eucalyptus oil is used for healing wounds, ulcers, burns, cuts, abrasions, and sores. It is also an effective salve for insect bites and stings. Furthermore, besides soothing the affected area, it also protects the open wound or irritated area from developing infections due to microbial activity and exposure to air.

Treats Respiratory Problems.

Eucalyptus essential oil is effective for treating a number of respiratory problems including cold, cough, running nose, sore throat, asthma, nasal congestion, bronchitis, and sinusitis. Eucalyptus oil is antibacterial, antifungal, antimicrobial, antiviral, anti-inflammatory and decongestant in nature, which makes it a good ingredient in many medicines that treat symptoms of respiratory tract problems, like asthma.

Removes Mental Exhaustion.

One very important reason that many people use eucalyptus oil is that it creates a cooling and refreshing effect. Eucalyptus oil, a stimulant, removes exhaustion and mental sluggishness and rejuvenates the spirits of people feeling sick. It is also believed, to be effective, in the treatment of stress and mental disorders.

Apart from mental exhaustion, eucalyptus essential oil is commonly used to stimulate mental activity and increase blood flow to the brain. Since the essential oil is considered a vasodilator, it increases the blood flow around the body by relaxing the blood vessels and allowing more blood to circulate. Basically, more blood to the brain means more brain power, and eucalyptus essential oil is commonly employed in classrooms and offices, as a form of causal aromatherapy to increase student and office staff performances.

Relieves Muscle Pain.

If you are experiencing joint and muscle pain, massaging eucalyptus oil on the surface of the skin helps to relieve stress and pain. The volatile eucalyptus oil is analgesic and anti-inflammatory in nature. Therefore it is often recommended to patients suffering from rheumatism, lumbago, sprained ligaments and tendons, stiff muscles, aches, fibrosis, and even nerve pain. The massage soap, should be massaged in a circular motion on the affected areas of the body.

Inhibits and eliminates Lice.

Due to its well-known qualities as a bug repellent and natural pesticide, it is frequently used as a natural treatment for lice. Some of the mainstream treatments of lice can be very severe and cause damage to the hair, as well as packed with dangerous chemicals that you don't want being absorbed into your skin. So use massage soap with eucalyptus oil through a lice-infested head is a much better and healthier solution.

Removes Intestinal Germs

Eucalyptus oil is a vermifuge and is frequently employed to remove germs in the intestine. Studies have shown that ingesting eucalyptus oil can deter many of the bacterial, microbial, and parasitic conditions that arise in the various parts of the body, particularly in susceptible areas like the colon and intestine.

Skin Care.

Eucalyptus oil is often applied topically to treat skin infections and it helps speed up healing.

Helps cope with Diabetes symptoms

When ingested, eucalyptus oil can help control blood sugar. Its properties as a vasodilator, mentioned above, mean that the entire body benefits from the increase in blood circulation. Diabetic patients commonly suffer from a lack of good circulation, and it can be very dangerous, even resulting in amputation or death. Therefore, it is a good idea to frequently massage your entire body with soap rich in eucalyptus oil, applied to the skin topically, and also inhale it as a vapor to ease the constriction of blood vessels. For best results, massage your soap onto the skin during a shower. The vasodilating and relaxing qualities of eucalyptus soap are believed to benefit diabetics.

Treats Fever.

Eucalyptus oil is also used for treating fever and reducing body temperature. This is why one of the common names of eucalyptus oil is "fever oil".

Merlins "Blue Sapphire" transparent soap, cleans effectively, clogged pores and acne. Your face doesn't feel tight or drier, after using it. It has a strong scent due to its Eucalyptus essential oil. Eucalyptus is well known for its properties to everyone related to aromatherapy, throughout the centuries. It has the following properties:

It heals wounds.

Eucalyptus essential oil has antiseptic qualities because of its germicidal property. Upon exposure to air, ozone is formed which is a well-researched antiseptic. Therefore, eucalyptus oil is used for healing wounds, ulcers, burns, cuts, abrasions, and sores. It is also an effective salve for insect bites and stings. Furthermore, besides soothing the affected area, it also protects the open wound or irritated area from developing infections due to microbial activity and exposure to air.

Treats Respiratory Problems.

Eucalyptus essential oil is effective for treating a number of respiratory problems including cold, cough, running nose, sore throat, asthma, nasal congestion, bronchitis, and sinusitis. Eucalyptus oil is antibacterial, antifungal, antimicrobial, antiviral, anti-inflammatory and decongestant in nature, which makes it a good ingredient in many medicines that treat symptoms of respiratory tract problems, like asthma.

Removes Mental Exhaustion.

One very important reason that many people use eucalyptus oil is that it creates a cooling and refreshing effect. Eucalyptus oil, a stimulant, removes exhaustion and mental sluggishness and rejuvenates the spirits of people feeling sick. It is also believed, to be effective, in the treatment of stress and mental disorders.

Apart from mental exhaustion, eucalyptus essential oil is commonly used to stimulate mental activity and increase blood flow to the brain. Since the essential oil is considered a vasodilator, it increases the blood flow around the body by relaxing the blood vessels and allowing more blood to circulate. Basically, more blood to the brain means more brain power, and eucalyptus essential oil is commonly employed in classrooms and offices, as a form of causal aromatherapy to increase student and office staff performances.

Relieves Muscle Pain.

If you are experiencing joint and muscle pain, massaging eucalyptus oil on the surface of the skin helps to relieve stress and pain. The volatile eucalyptus oil is analgesic and anti-inflammatory in nature. Therefore it is often recommended to patients suffering from rheumatism, lumbago, sprained ligaments and tendons, stiff muscles, aches, fibrosis, and even nerve pain. The massage soap, should be massaged in a circular motion on the affected areas of the body.

Inhibits and eliminates Lice.

Due to its well-known qualities as a bug repellent and natural pesticide, it is frequently used as a natural treatment for lice. Some of the mainstream treatments of lice can be very severe and cause damage to the hair, as well as packed with dangerous chemicals that you don't want being absorbed into your skin. So use massage soap with eucalyptus oil through a lice-infested head is a much better and healthier solution.

Removes Intestinal Germs

Eucalyptus oil is a vermifuge and is frequently employed to remove germs in the intestine. Studies have shown that ingesting eucalyptus oil can deter many of the bacterial, microbial, and parasitic conditions that arise in the various parts of the body, particularly in susceptible areas like the colon and intestine.

Skin Care.

Eucalyptus oil is often applied topically to treat skin infections and it helps speed up healing.

Helps cope with Diabetes symptoms

When ingested, eucalyptus oil can help control blood sugar. Its properties as a vasodilator, mentioned above, mean that the entire body benefits from the increase in blood circulation. Diabetic patients commonly suffer from a lack of good circulation, and it can be very dangerous, even resulting in amputation or death. Therefore, it is a good idea to frequently massage your entire body with soap rich in eucalyptus oil, applied to the skin topically, and also inhale it as a vapor to ease the constriction of blood vessels. For best results, massage your soap onto the skin during a shower. The vasodilating and relaxing qualities of eucalyptus soap are believed to benefit diabetics.

Treats Fever.

Eucalyptus oil is also used for treating fever and reducing body temperature. This is why one of the common names of eucalyptus oil is "fever oil".

The various health benefits of lavender essential oil include the following:

Bug Repellent.

The smell of lavender essential oil is potent for many types of bugs like mosquitoes, midges, and moths. Apply some lavender oil on the exposed skin when outside to prevent these irritating bites. Furthermore, if you do happen to be bitten by one of those bugs, lavender essential oil has anti-inflammatory qualities that will reduce the irritation and the pain associated with bug bites.

Induces Sleep.

Lavender essential oil induces sleep and is thus used as an alternative treatment for insomnia. Aromatherapy with soap containing lavender essential oil, has a relaxing impact on people; thereby, it often replaces modern medicines for sleep issues.

Relieves Stress & Anxiety.

Lavender essential oil has a calming scent which makes it an excellent tonic for the nerves and anxiety issues. Therefore, taking a shower with a soap containing lavender essential oil, can be helpful in treating migraines, headaches, depression, nervous tension and emotional stress. The refreshing aroma removes nervous exhaustion and restlessness, and increases mental activity.

Treats Acne.

According to dermatologists and aromatherapists, lavender essential oil is one of the most beneficial oils in the treatment of acne, which is a very uncomfortable and embarrassing condition that primarily affects young people as they move through puberty, but can also afflict adults. It is characterized by red, raised sores on the face and body that develop due to a bacterial infection near the sebum gland. When sebum cannot be properly secreted from the sebum glands on the face, it begins to build up, particularly because puberty stimulates extra sebum and bacteria feed off of it, creating a vicious cycle of irritation, infection, and visible sores that can result in serious scarring. Lavender essential oil inhibits the bacteria that cause the initial infection, helps to regulate some of the over-excretion of sebum by hormonal manipulation and can reduce the signs of scarring after the acne has begun to heal. Adding a small amount of lavender essential oil to other skin creams or ointments can greatly increase the potential for relief and healing.

Relieves Pain.

Lavender essential oil is known as an excellent remedy for various types of pains including those caused by sore and tense muscles, muscular aches, rheumatism, sprains, backache, and lumbago. It seems, regular massage with a soap containing lavender oil, can provide relief from pain in the joints.

Stimulates Urine Flow.

Lavender essential oil is good for urinary disorders because of its stimulating effect on urine production. Furthermore, it helps in restoring hormonal balance and reducing cystitis or inflammation of the urinary bladder. It also reduces associated cramps with these and other disorders.

Treats Respiratory Disorders.

Lavender oil is widely used for various respiratory problems including throat infection, flu, cough, cold, asthma, sinus congestion, bronchitis, whooping cough, laryngitis, and tonsillitis. The oil is either used in the form of vapor or is applied to the skin of neck, chest, and back. It is also added to many vaporizers and inhalers that are commonly used for cold and cough. The stimulating nature of lavender essential oil can also loosen up the phlegm and relieve congestion associated with respiratory conditions, thus speeding up the recovery process and helping the body naturally eliminate phlegm and other unwanted material. The vapor of lavender essential oil also has antibacterial qualities which can battle respiratory tract infections.

Hair Care.

Lavender essential oil is useful for hair care because it has been shown to be very effective on lice, lice eggs, and nits. Furthermore, lavender essential oil has also been shown to be very helpful in the treatment of hair loss, particularly for patients who suffer from alopecia. Soaps containing lavender oil, are sometimes recommended as a preventative measure for male and female pattern baldness.

Improves Blood Circulation.

Lavender essential oil is also good for improving circulation of blood in the body. Aromatherapy using soaps with lavender oil has beneficial effects on coronary circulation. It also lowers blood pressure and is often used as a treatment for hypertension. This means that not only do the organs increase their levels of oxygenation, promoting muscle strength and health, but brain activity can have a noticeable boost, skin remains bright and flushed with blood, and the body is protected from the risks of heart attack and atherosclerosis often associated with poor blood circulation.

Boosts Immunity.

Regular use of lavender essential oil provides resistance to a variety of diseases.

Treats Eczema.

It is used to treat various skin disorders such as acne, wrinkles, psoriasis, and other inflammatory conditions. It is commonly used to speed up the healing process of wounds, cuts, burns, and sunburns because it improves the repair of scared tissues. Lavender oil is also added to chamomile to treat eczema.

According to dermatologists and aromatherapists, lavender essential oil is one of the most beneficial oils in the treatment of acne, which is a very uncomfortable and embarrassing condition that primarily affects young people as they move through puberty, but can also afflict adults. It is characterized by red, raised sores on the face and body that develop due to a bacterial infection near the sebum gland. When sebum cannot be properly secreted from the sebum glands on the face, it begins to build up, particularly because puberty stimulates extra sebum and bacteria feed off of it, creating a vicious cycle of irritation, infection, and visible sores that can result in serious scarring. Lavender essential oil inhibits the bacteria that cause the initial infection, helps to regulate some of the over-excretion of sebum by hormonal manipulation and can reduce the signs of scarring after the acne has begun to heal. Adding a small amount of lavender essential oil to other skin creams or ointments can greatly increase the potential for relief and healing.

Relieves Pain.

Lavender essential oil is known as an excellent remedy for various types of pains including those caused by sore and tense muscles, muscular aches, rheumatism, sprains, backache, and lumbago. It seems, regular massage with a soap containing lavender oil, can provide relief from pain in the joints.

Stimulates Urine Flow.

Lavender essential oil is good for urinary disorders because of its stimulating effect on urine production. Furthermore, it helps in restoring hormonal balance and reducing cystitis or inflammation of the urinary bladder. It also reduces associated cramps with these and other disorders.

Treats Respiratory Disorders.

Lavender oil is widely used for various respiratory problems including throat infection, flu, cough, cold, asthma, sinus congestion, bronchitis, whooping cough, laryngitis, and tonsillitis. The oil is either used in the form of vapor or is applied to the skin of neck, chest, and back. It is also added to many vaporizers and inhalers that are commonly used for cold and cough. The stimulating nature of lavender essential oil can also loosen up the phlegm and relieve congestion associated with respiratory conditions, thus speeding up the recovery process and helping the body naturally eliminate phlegm and other unwanted material. The vapor of lavender essential oil also has antibacterial qualities which can battle respiratory tract infections.

Hair Care.

Lavender essential oil is useful for hair care because it has been shown to be very effective on lice, lice eggs, and nits. Furthermore, lavender essential oil has also been shown to be very helpful in the treatment of hair loss, particularly for patients who suffer from alopecia. Soaps containing lavender oil, are sometimes recommended as a preventative measure for male and female pattern baldness.

Improves Blood Circulation.

Lavender essential oil is also good for improving circulation of blood in the body. Aromatherapy using soaps with lavender oil has beneficial effects on coronary circulation. It also lowers blood pressure and is often used as a treatment for hypertension. This means that not only do the organs increase their levels of oxygenation, promoting muscle strength and health, but brain activity can have a noticeable boost, skin remains bright and flushed with blood, and the body is protected from the risks of heart attack and atherosclerosis often associated with poor blood circulation.

Boosts Immunity.

Regular use of lavender essential oil provides resistance to a variety of diseases.

Treats Eczema.

It is used to treat various skin disorders such as acne, wrinkles, psoriasis, and other inflammatory conditions. It is commonly used to speed up the healing process of wounds, cuts, burns, and sunburns because it improves the repair of scared tissues. Lavender oil is also added to chamomile to treat eczema.

Merlin Organic Cosmetics and Herbal Personal Care Products: Aromatherapy Inspired by Nature, Realised through Science, at the right Price!

All Merlin products are made of innovative organic and herbal ingredients. Most of the herbs are grown by ourselves in Greece, Italy, Spain and other Mediterranean countries. The active ingredients we use derive from world renowned research facilities and top biotechnology laboratories. We prefer working with natural bio-available ingredients. Our Organic Cosmetics products, combine a unique blend of ingredients for a velvety soft skin. Those products replenish skin glycolipids and phospholipids and moisture skin immediately on application. They promote blood circulation and restore, elasticity and skin firmness, thus effectively protecting it from premature aging. Aromatherapy, also known as Essential Oil therapy, is defined as the art and science of utilizing naturally extracted aromatic herbal essences from plants, to balance, harmonize and promote the health of body, mind and spirit. It seeks to unify physiological, psychological and spiritual processes to enhance an individual's innate healing process. Merlin biological Aromatherapy products, can be used for therapeutic applications, to increase energy, to reduce the effects of stress, and to restore lost balance to mind, body and soul. Think positively. Think of wizard Merlin...

33. THE CONCEPT – WHY BUY MERLIN PRODUCTS

We proudly developed Merlin products, and present them to you, based on the following concepts: We believe hard working people of all ages, should be able to preserve their teeth, hair and enjoy their well being for as long as their life lasts. We developed all our products, so that you can use them, in minimum amounts, and still enjoy their protection from every day attrition. Our sun block cream will completely protect your skin from damaging sun rays, and will reverse any damage that has already occurred from long sun exposure in the past. Our toothpaste, will enable you to keep your teeth for lifetime, and almost diminish your visits to your dentist. Our hair regeneration shampoo will inhibit you from becoming bald, and will enable you to have long young looking hair, when you get older. Our age reversal face cream, will make you look and feel, younger as the years go by. And all our products are made with natural, biological ingredients. The reason we developed such products is because ordinary, hard working people, like me and you, just don't have time to deal with their well being. They need real, supreme quality products that can help them do so, at a reasonable cost. Enter the Golden age for your hair and skin. Its certainly worth trying...
